

PROUDLY SUPPORTING PEOPLE WITH ALL NEUROLOGICAL CONDITIONS

“Plenty of laughter and adrenaline at Step Up for MSWA”

Running and cycling are two of Anthony Sciano’s passions when keeping fit and after meeting Stuart Wegner, one of Step Up for MSWA longest participants and supporters, he is now dedicated to climbing 1,103 stairs to the top of Central Park, in the name of MSWA.

“I met Stuart (Keep Stairing team founder) at a friend’s birthday party approximately five years ago and began talking about my two passions. Stuart explained how rewarding the climb was and introduced me to the Shadforth Financial Group Step Up for MSWA. His positive experience in helping to make a change, resonated with me. I also thought, why not put my fitness to good use,” said Anthony.

Anthony didn’t know much about MS and other neurological conditions before signing up, but after his first attempt in 2012, he decided he saw real value in committing to supporting the MSWA community, and 2018 will be his sixth year.

He said, “Helping to raise awareness and funds for MSWA is empowering, and every little bit counts. It’s also great to know that the money raised goes towards provide services and support, building facilities across Western Australia and fund vital research.”

What Anthony enjoys most about Step Up for MSWA is the laughter and adrenaline which comes from being a part of a fantastic team. He’s met new people who are also passionate about the same cause which keeps him coming back each year.

This year, Anthony wants to raise even more funds and encourage more people to tackle the climb. He said “Come and show your support on the day or sponsor our team - Keep Stairing. I’m also hoping to complete ten Central Park climbs in 2019, wish me luck.”
